

STATISTICS THAT SHOULD BE OF CONCERN TO EVERYONE

In recent years there has been a significant withdrawal in the influence that a father has on children in families of divorce. Statistics show that most custodial parents are mothers. On an average the custodial mother spends 80% of the time with the children compared to only 20% with the father. Analysis of these trends in paternal involvement in the lives of the children result in other alarming statistics that should be of concern to everyone.

From Fatherless homes come:

- 85 % of all children that exhibit behaviour related disorders
- 80 % of all rapists motivated with displaced anger
- 71 % of all high school dropouts
- 85% of all youths sitting in prisons

The most frequent reason for fathers fading from their children's lives is the interference of the mother as well as the failure of the legal and court system to recognize and to understand the importance to children of being parented by both parents.

Getting fathers kicked out of their children's lives often starts with a phone call to the police with false allegations of abuse from the mother.

Once Dad is labelled as an abuser, even if he was innocent, he may never be able to have a normal healthy relationship with his children ever again.

* sources of data available upon request

Pleading guilty to a crime you did not commit is setting a poor example to your children, your family and setting you and your children up for a future of fear and misery under the control of your spouse.

Help send a message to the system that men of honour are not going to stand by and get kicked down by the system without a fight. Show your children, your family and your friends that fighting for justice and fairness is important to you.

For further information about the destruction of children and families by domestic violence courts then contact the local organization indicated below

Don't Plead Guilty!

Helpful information to keep you from getting sucked into the domestic violence trap intended to destroy you and put your spouse clearly in command of the home, the children and YOU!

Before you get sucked into the trap - understand the objectives of the domestic violence courts!

Once you understand what it is the system is trying to achieve then you will in a better position to protect yourself. The goal of the justice system in domestic violence situations is not about achieving fairness and justice. The strategy of the system is very simple:

- To get the man to plead guilty as quickly as possible.
- To obtain as many guilty pleas from men as possible which will help to distort domestic violence figures and make men look more violent than they really are.
- To avoid a criminal trial. This ties up too much time and creates a lot of work for prosecutors. They want lots of convictions without the work of a trial.
- To put the woman effectively in control of the household, the children and the man for the rest of the man's life.
- To give the woman the upper hand in family court should she decide to end the relationship at some time in the future.

To achieve its objectives, the justice system applies the carrot and the stick approach. After you have been charged by the police their strategy is simple.....

Step one – they give you the big stick

Shortly after being charged, you will appear before a judge and a court date set. A restraining order is often placed against you where you are ordered to stay away from your home, wife and children. A court date will set that is often months ahead. In some cases they may keep you in jail for a few days to put you under a lot of pressure with your home and work affairs.

The court gives you the stick because they want to put you under a lot of pressure and inconvenience which will help make you more agreeable to their demands which will follow later. A court date a long way down the road will again add even more pressure as you think of not seeing your kids for weeks and having to live out of a suitcase until the court. They also know that if the man breaks the restraining order, even at the request of his spouse that there are grave consequences for the man.

Step Two – They offer you the carrot

At some point down the road, the Crown will come to you or your solicitor for a “deal” and ask if you would like to plead guilty to the charges. They will tell you that if you plead guilty that this will allow you to be able to go back home or to go to your wife and kids and that you will get a simple conditional discharge with no criminal record. They will tell you that if you don't plead guilty that it will cost you lots of money if legal fees and that you may be barred from returning home until after the court. In fact, the authorities will pretend to be your friend and say they want to help you go home and that pleading guilty is the best way to put an end to your dilemma. If you have a legal aid lawyer, in all likelihood the lawyer will tell you that they cannot afford to defend you on legal aid and to plead guilty even if you are innocent. Most legal Aid lawyers don't care about justice, they just want to get the money.

At this point the system knows that you are likely frustrated with not being able to go home, see your kids and carry on a normal life. They know as well, just the fact that you have been forced out of your home is labelling you as an abusive person in the community. The system is working to make you desperate enough to be able to manipulate you into a guilty plea. They just want your guilty plea so that they can get on to getting more and more guilty pleas from men and to make the statistics look like men are violent and abusive.

If you know that you are truly innocent, don't jeopardize the future of you and your children. When you are asked to plead guilty tell them clearly.....

NO WAY!

Be prepared to fight for truth and justice. Show your kids and your family that you are not going to get shafted by the system or take it lying down. Show them you are going to FIGHT BACK!

Some of the consequences if you were to plead guilty:

- The next time that you and your spouse get into an argument and she calls the police you will get hauled away from your home, no questions asked. You may even be jailed for an extensive period of time.
- At any time in the future should your spouse decide to leave the relationship she will be able to claim that you are abusive. Your guilty plea will be all the evidence she needs to give to the court to have you kicked out, get custody of the kids and possession of the home. This will give her the upper hand in family court.
- You will literally live in fear of ever getting your spouse angry again as she will be able to use your guilty plea against you at any time in the future. It's like having a free ticket to kick you out of your home that she can redeem at any time. Is this the kind of relationship you want to live in? Do you and your children want to live under such fear, intimidation and control?
- You will likely be stopped and banned from entering the United States for many years. Forget that trip to Disneyland with your family or friends.